The funeral was set for an early day.

... who found himself placed in such a range position that he could offer but little consolation. The only satisfaction Clarence Lind, was that he had crushed Bill Jones, "the destroyer of child's life."

The funeral was set for an early day.

Our story is finished, and if it could make the burden of even one of those unfortunate girls who work in our people's kitchens lighter, we shall feel that this story has not been written in vain.

[THE END.]

in. Like lightning several were in their pockets and replied in rns, "Yes, I did." Then the man ed so that he could jump off and run necessary and said, "Then why don't get down and look for it before he one picks it up." And he skipped the car.—N. Y. Graphic.
